Printed "b" and "s" in word benefits shows the writer over eats, smokes, or some other self destructive habit in order to kill sex drive. Shows self indulgence, when printing is mixed with cursive writing like this, the person doesn't feel adequate.

The writer of this specimen is an extremely emotional person. He is dominated by the influence of his emotions. He is quick to feel joy, sorrow, anger, affection, shame, disappointment, and elation; and these emotions can come to him with terrific force.

In early childhood he was made to realize that the world in general responds favorably to moderation in behavior, and that extremes of emotional expression do not get him what he wants. Accordingly, he developed a few controlling factors to bring his behavior into acceptable range, as he does desire approval. He has developed some characteristics such as, pride, dignity and conservatism. However, these traits are not strong enough that they over rule his unstable and at times hysterical personality. He never learned to bridle his emotionality, and therefore has a lot of wasted emotional energy. Makes his decisions based on the emotion of the moment, he is extremely impulsive. Has "ups" and "downs" of mood. He will become hysterical and completely loose control in the face of certain emotional crises.

He has a penetrating intellect, which has not been used to capacity. (At least at the time of this writing.) As you can see by the trait sheet, there are far more negative, (or reductive) traits influencing his mental processes. His confusion of interests, impulsiveness, prejudices and narrow-mindedness over balance any of the positive things he has going for him in this area.

He restricts his imagination instead of using it to good advantage, to help set goals for himself. He fears failure therefore has set very low goals, (at the time of this specimen). He desires the security of certain accomplishments, he does not extend himself beyond what he thinks he can achieve. His ambition and will power are moderate to weak, being sufficient only for his immediate needs.

He seems to have strong determination to express himself. He does have doubts and frustrations about expressing himself. He wants and needs love, and wants to do things his way. His confusion of interests again interfers with power to achieve what he wants, and making decisions. Once he makes up his mind to do something he will be persistent about finishing it. He could be a headstrong individual.

Again you will note that his reductive influences outweigh the intensifying influences. He has confusion of interests, underestimates himself and can not make up his mind much of the time. He is a whiner, feels sorry for himself, he thinks that life hasn't given him a fair shake. He has not been happy with his life.

This writer is hesitant about committing himself to a definate course of action. In order to eliminate some unwanted thoughts, he unconsciously represses them. Some of his emotional experiences will leave him; as unimportant, while others will stay with him for a long time, others that disturb him, he will repress. The pressure of his writing shows mental exhaustion or the inability to cope with a situation in which he was involved at the time.

He shows some indications that he fears being ridiculed and it hampers his expressiveness and performance. He'd rather sell himself short than take a long shot at success. Repeated hurts, real or imagined have caused him to be unconsciously alert and sensitive to criticism.

Once in awhile, when he feels unable to cope with his problems, and as a last resort, he finds imagined security by withdrawing into the past, or himself. Having heard criticism (again real or imagined) when young, but little praise has left him reaching out for love and approval, but he fears rejection and criticism.

He has built some defensive traits against his fears. They are well concealed and some are evident in only rare instances, but they stand ready for action at a moments notice. He has built this wall of defenses to protect his ego. Sometimes he must defend his impulsive actions and his self acknowledged shortcomings.

The first group of traits I will discuss are the adjustment traits that have helped the writer adjust to situations in which he felt his ego is endangered in social conflicts of various kinds.

He handpicks his friends, trusting only a very few, carefully choosing those whom he takes into his confidence. Usually his friends will share similar interests. He is also selective in admitting new ideas into his thinking allowing only ideas that support his efforts, conscious or otherwise; elemenating stimuli that may be emotionally disturbing.

He has a sixth-sense that enables him to key his responsiveness to that of others. This is invaluable to him in adjusting to strained relationships. It helps him to assess a person or situation intuitively, promoting ready adjustment to new conditions.

Faced with what others may think is an insurmountable obstacle, he will repeatedly chip and chip away until the obstacle is demolished.

He has a fair amount of pride and dignity which encourages him to make an extra effort to overcome trying circumstances, he feels it would not be fitting to show weakness. The inner confidence he appears to possess enables him to meet life with dignity and in a manner that draws the respect of others.

This is a sarcastic individual who does not realize that he is harboring a desire to punish himself, and he directs the punishment toward others, in the form of cutting, hostile remarks. He is protecting his innermost self. He feels that his rights as an individual are being invaded, and he is always alert for impositions. His impulsiveness adds to his tension, which he can not hold in check, therefore, he expresses his tensions vehemently. He is easily irritated, and restless. He either dislikes his work, delay in activity, and is impatient with himself or others.

In order for the writer to escape all his fears he does not face life squarely or admit the truth to himself. Unwilling to accept life as it is he lives behind a facade of self-deception. He ignores or will destroy facts that he is reluctant to face. He is biased in the facts he allows himself to accept.

He is secretive about himself, telling others oly what he wants them to know. He conceals personal information, he has deep personal burdens he does not care to reveal to others. He can and will maneuver smoothly in hedging and circumventing the issue, he evades the truth. He has a tendency to misrepresent facts to avoid disapproval of others. He has learned, at an early age to associate the truth with punishment, emotional embarrassment, and disapproval. He has a strong need for the approval of others, because this has been unmet, in his mind, he compensates with self-approval, which at times may serve to isolate him from others. He wants compliments but won't give any. He doesn't show appreciation of others, he wants to conquer everyone, he thinks he can do no wrong and blames others for things that go wrong. In his search for self-fulfillment, he moves from one area of interest to another. When bored by routine living, he tends to search for excitement in change, generously sampling different friends and experiences.

Looking at his trait chart -- you can see his Integrity column leaves a lot to be desired. His impulsiveness causes him to respond so quickly that he acts before he considers the consequences. His prejudice clouds his reason and leads to unworthiness, revealing flaws in his integrity. He comes to a conclusion without sufficient knowledge or just grounds. He doesn't allow his brain to work because his prejudices are working so hard. Inclined to believe that silence is indeed golden, he resists others prying into his thoughts and motives. He keeps his opinions inside himslef, since he feels to let them stray will cause disapproval. His vanity helps him gain favor with himself, but it puts him in disfavor with others. His will power doesn't have the strength to reach high goals. The reductive influences in this area over balance his supportive traits.

At the time of this sample the writer was not very socially mature. His fears and anxieties block or discourage interpersonal associations. His hostility traits demand expression and therefore he is generally ineffective in a social setting. He lacks the desire to co-operate with others and is inclined to be a loner.

In summary it seems this writer looked and longed for love, approval and had the desire to communicate as a youngster and he felt he was met with criticism, leaving him frustrated. He seems to have had some problem with a father figure in his life or he has a distorted view of his past. Instead of using his good mental capabilities to good advantage he has confused his interests, has let his impulsiveness get the best of him, has been afraid to set practical or distant goals for himself fearing he could not accomplish them. He doesn't feel he's been dealt a fair deal in life and feels sorry for himself. He conceals facts about himself, feeling it is better to be evasive than face facts about things he is reluctant to admit, even to himself. His integrity lacks a lot and he prefers being by himself, or with close friends, as he finds it frustrating to try to express himself. He is a very unstable personality, at least at the time of this writing sample.

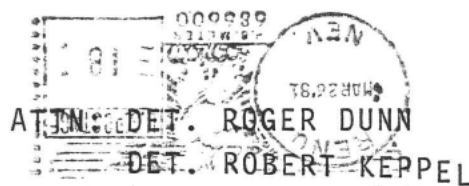
Robert Keppel and Roger Dunn
King County Detet s Homicide Division


During the summer of 1974, I worked for the United States Forest Service at Verlot, Washington. My duties included fire patrol, weather information relay to Seattle, and patrol and check of unauthorized camping areas.

One day as I was on my way to the U.S. Weather Station on Mallardy Ridge, I saw a car parked where I usually parked. Not many people stop in this area and I assumed it was another forest service employee, however, the car was not familiar to me. As I drove near the car I realized the man was a stranger, about 25 to 35 years old with dark hair. He smiled. He was just there, in my usual parking spot, sitting in his car (not a VW) with the windows rolled up, smiling. Usually I would park the Forest Service truck and walk to the weather station, but that day I decided to drive. I looked in my rear-view mirror and could see him, still smiling a queer haunting smile. I called the Verlot station on my radio and reported the stranger. I felt uneasy so I just gathered the previous days weather report. The usual instrument reading would take awhile and I had not received an acknowledgement from Verlot, so I could only assume they had not received my message. I ran back to the pick-up and was driving away, when I saw the Ranger's station wagon coming. They had received my message, but could not reach me with their reply. Radio problems were not unusual. They were concerned about the report and felt an immediate check was needed. Dave, a summer employee for the Forest Service felt he should talk with the stranger. Dave did not have to walk to the car, the man came down to meet him. I remained in the station wagon, not close enough to hear the conversation, but close enough to listen for any trouble. Dave returned visibly shaken after his talk. The man told Dave that he had been camping on Green Mountain for the past two weeks, however, we later found out that the Green Mountain patrol had never seen him. The man seemed very peculiar, even his smile was odd. His story was strange and his reason for being in the area unconvincing. The stranger also said he was running and hiding from the communists. They were after him because he had discovered some kind of plot in the company where he had worked. Dave worked his way over to the car and took down the license number and noted that the car was from Oregon. Dave noticed a large rock, a crow bar, a sheep raking comb, and handcuffs in the car. He did not see any evidence of camping gear, except perhaps an ice chest. The man was advised by Dave to camp only in designated areas and not to park at the Weather Station. The man said he was parked there because he was going to take the Mallardy Ridge trail hike. This is a very unpolular hike and not usually noted by hikers since it is undesignated and unmaintained.

The sheriff was aprised of the situation, but could do nothing since no criminal act had been reported. A woman at the Verlot store had called the sheriff regarding this man. She felt uneasy just by his manner. The Department of Motor Vehicles later reported an unpaid traffic violation on the car.

Dave accompanied me on my Mallardy runs, and after a day or two, we again met the stranger. This time he appeared normal, not at all a menace. Dave asked him why he was still in the area and the man said he had had tire troubles. There are no gas stations in the area.

I was transferred to the Green Mountain patrol for about two weeks and then put back on the Mallardy patrol. Dave accompanied me for about 7 or 10 days, during which time the stranger was not seen. On the second day alone on patrol I again encountered the stranger. I was on my way down hill after taking the weather readings when his car came around a bend. The road was narrow and I had to be careful since I could go over the edge on my side. When we had passed I noticed in my rear-view mirror a passenger in his car and it appeared to be a man. however, it could have been a women. The position of the passenger struck me as rather strange, there seemed to be something unnatural about it. They were sitting close, up straight, almost as if they didn't want to be close together, but were. I radioed in a report to the Verlot station, and one of the men went up to search for them, but found no trace. This was the last time the stranger was seen in the area.

I havn't thought about all this in years, but the other day I read the story in Reader's Digest, "To Catch A Killer" and the smile on Ted Bundy seemed so like the smile on the stranger I encountered during the Mallardy weather runs. In other pictures of Bundy, that I had seen, he was always wearing a turtle-neck sweater, blazer and unsmiling, and I never saw the resemblance. The smile mostly haunts me, but also the items in his car, and the fact that he stayed in an area that was so remote. This area, in 1974, was a quiet place--with no logging operations that summer, also a large tree had fallen in the road which prevented trailers and campers from traveling into the camping area. Moreover, the road leads to nowhere. There is no lake there, no special hikes, nothing to attract the outdoors person. There is the Mallardy Ridge hike, but as stated before, it's really not well known. There are old mines on the ridge, and very dangerous old mine shafts, one in particular that goes down at an angle and if filled with water, which would be quite impossible to get out of.

After so many years this information may be of little importance, but, nevertheless I felt inclined to write to you regarding the rather odd stranger during the summer of 1974 when so many young women were disappearing in Washington State.

Detective Robert Keppel

Dear Detectives Dunn & Keppel:

Recently an article appeared in the March 1981 issue of Reader's Digest entitled "To Catch A Killer", by Nathan M. Adams, regarding THEODORE ROBERT COWELL BUNDY. According to the article, Theodore Bundy was investigated by your department concerning the disappearance and death of various female subjects from your locale.

During the past several years a number of female-involved homicides occurred which remain unsolved in our jurisdiction. In most cases, skeletal remains were uncovered in remote parts of our county. Listed are two victims and circumstances surrounding their cases:

> [redacted]
> Death caused probably by a blow to the head. The body was found in a remote area July 26, 1971. There is no apparent motive.
> [redacted]
> Death probably caused by a gunshot wound. The body was found in a shallow grave near Derby Dam, September 21, 1975. The victim may have been kidnapped from the Newport, Oregon area and transported to this area. There is no apparent motive.

There are others, however if the dates of custody are accurate in the article, we can eliminate these. We have forwarded teletypes to Florida and Utah for confirmation of these dates.

During your investigation a profile was developed about BUNDY and his victims. I would appreciate such a profile, which might be compared to our cases.

Additionally, any information as to BUNDY's whereabouts, week-to-week, during those aforementioned dates is requested. Also, is there any information that he traveled to Reno, Washoe County, Nevada?

Thanking you in advance for your assistance,

Very truly yours,

Dear Lt. Coppa:

The information we have on Ted Bundy for 1971 is sparse. In the summer of 1971, Bundy was attending the University of Washington Summer School. No attendance records are available. He was working for Pedline in the University District. His residence was also in Seattle. There is no information available on Bundy ever travelling to Reno.

Our most accurate records of Bundy are for 1973-74. For 1975 information I suggest you contact Det. Jerry Thompson, Salt Lake City Sheriff's Office.

A psychological profile of the victims was not accomplished in any polished form for publication. Please find enclosed summaries of our missing girls as well as crime scene descriptions. A psychological profile of our suspect was accomplished previous to Bundy's identification but the psychologists requested it not be published. The profile was amazingly accurate in detail to Bundy's personality.

If I can be of any furhter assistance, please call.

Dear Sir:

I was reading an article in the March 81 issue of Readers Digest which was a special feature "TO CATCH A KILLER". After reading this article about Ted BUNDY, I was wondering if he could possibly be involved in a double homicide which was discovered in this area on 4 Nov 70.

According to the article Bundy was born in Vermont on 24 Nov 46, and then moved to Philadelphia, Penna., until the age of 4. He then moved to Tacoma, Washington, and then graduated from high school there in 1965. He then attended the University of Puget Sound in Tacoma for a year before transferring to the University of Washington in Seattle, and interrupted his college career several times, once to spend a summer at Stanford Univ. in California; once to attend the spring semester at Temple University in Philadelphia. The Philadelphia police reported that they had a series of murders of young women at that time, and that they abrubtly ended when Bundy returned to the West where he resumed his studies at the Univ. of Washington and graduated in 1972.

I am trying to ascertain if you would know if BUNDY would have been in the Philadelphia area during the period of 24 Oct-4 Nov 70, the time when the double homicide occurred in this area.

I am attaching a resume of this incident that occurred in our area in 1970, and would appreciate any helpful information that you could offer.

Sincerely,

Re: Ted Bundy

Bundy was in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania at Temple University during Spring Quarter 1969. His residence address was 4039 South Warner Street, LaFayette Hill, Pa., starting in December 1969. He did fracture his ankle while in Philadelphia.

Our investigation revealed that he returned to the Seattle area in September 1969 because he attended a driving school for a poor driving record.

During the period 29 Oct - 4 November 1970 Bundy was in the Seattle area registered at the University of Washington. He was also employed at a firm called Pedline in the U-District. None of his friends that was interviewed recalled any trips to Pennsylvania. They did recall his summer trips to California and Utah, but not farther east than Utah. He was with his girlfriend on the trip to Utah and it was by automobile. The trips that Bundy took were by car in 1970.

Another factor that would appear to rule Bundy out was the method of death. All the deaths that have been attributed to Bundy were caused by blows to the head and/or strangulation. To our knowledge no one has ever seen Bundy with a firearm.

If I can be of any further assistance don't hesitate to contact me.

Graphoanalysis... and human understanding

HANDWRITING is important. From the earliest times, the stamp of individuality it provides has been considered of great significance.

We place much value on a signed portrait, an autographed book or a signed work of art. A manuscript, although the words printed from it are identical, is a treasured document; a businessman takes time to sign hundreds of letters by hand; a politician places his signature as well as his picture on his campaign advertising; social letters must be handwritten. Why? Because, subconsciously, we all realize that there is a part of the writer himself in the way he writes. As his features are distinctive, his writing is his alone.

The trained Graphoanalyst sees in a written page the real portrait of the man. The Graphoanalyst can read what the writer says and he can also determine in the writing how he thinks—what he is. No wonder that for generations scholars have sought to explore the secrets of handwriting.

Graphoanalysis is the study of the individual strokes of writing in order to identify the character and personality of the writer. It is not occult, nor is it related in any way to such pseudoscientific approaches. It is a scientific method of personality assessment based on research that was conducted over a period of more than fifty years. This research was carried out by both empirical and clinical processes, and Graphoanalysis is currently being further validated by statistical studies, both within and without the framework of institutions of higher education.

To know one's self is to be able to use one's capabilities to the best of advantage. To know others is to understand them and to be able to work with them.

Doctors, ministers, lawyers, police officers, businessmen, husbands, wives and parents find immediate accurate data for their approach to others and a key to their guidance.

Many heartaches could be avoided if one person understood another. Many marriages could be saved, vocational situations improved, and social and psychological problems handled more intelligently. Many a child would develop to his full potentialities were he completely understood and carefully guided.

Graphoanalysis is as dedicated to human understanding and happiness as the medical profession is dedicated to physical health. It is a sacred trust. Graphoanalysts are certified by only the International Graphoanalysis Society, 325 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, Illinois 60606.

Further information about Graphoanalysis services or training may be had without charge from the Society or from the Certified Graphoanalyst who prepared this report.

Dear Ken:

Ted Bundy's contacts in your jurisdiction were numerous from 1967 to 1974. The account of his activities are as follows:

June - August 1967:	Attended Stanford University and lived in Palo Alto.
July 8, 1967:	Had dinner in San Francisco with his girlfriend.
1969:	Late Spring was in San Francisco with girlfriend. Stayed in Mendocino.
August 20, 1970:	Bundy received traffic citation in Marin County.
May 16, 1972:	Bundy sent University of Washington transcript to University of California, Berkeley.
June 13, 1973:	Bundy stayed at Mark Hopkins Motel in San Francisco.

Information regarding Bundy's whereabouts on February 13, 1973 are sketchy at best. Our records indicate Bundy sent an application to the University of Utah Law School on February 15, 1973; Bundy received a $400 invoice for consultation services on February 15, 1973; and Bundy received a $400 invoice for consultation services on February 28, 1973.

Information on Bundy's whereabouts on March 24, 1974 are as follows:

(1) Checking account:

03/23/74	Safeway Foods, Seattle
03/25/74	PEMCO, Seattle
03/25/74	Standard Oil
03/25/74	Two (2) deposits
03/26/74	University Bookstore, Seattle

(2) Standard Oil credit card:
03/25/74 43rd and Roosevelt, Seattle
03/26/74 Olympic Hotel, Seattle

The checks as well as credit card receipts possess Bundy's signature.

Bundy's lack of activity in February 1973 probably indicates he ran out of money or was imposing upon his Seattle girlfriend. Records for May 5, 1974 were also sparse and it turned out he was in Corvallis, Oregon -- 265 miles from Seattle -- killing [redacted].

Bundy did have a San Francisco girlfriend who was the major reason he went to California. This girl's identity has been kept quite confidential on our part. We wish to protect her from any press inquiries. However, if you see the need to contact her to further isolate Bundy's activities in California, please contact FBI Agent Kathy McChesney in the San Francisco office. McChesney is my former partner who investigated Bundy with me and has also kept up a relationship with the girlfriend.

By the way, Bundy did have a beard for various periods of 1973. [redacted] certainly appears to fit the profile of Bundy's victims. Bundy was a frequent law library visitor throughout his prowling activities. It may also interest you that Bundy used a sling and dropped books in front of a library as a scam to have girls lured to his parked VW Bug.

If I can be of further assistance, don't hesitate to call [redacted].

BERNARD G. WINCKOSKI, SHERIFF-DIRECTOR

Attention: Bob Keppel
Homicide Unit

Dear Bob,

We have recently read the article in Reader's Digest about Ted Bundy. We have noticed several similarities in two homicide cases from our area that are unsolved and feel that Bundy would be considered a possible suspect.

The first case was the strangulation death of a 21 year old, white female, whose body was discovered on February 16, 1973 in a wooded rural area near Palo Alto, California. The locator of the victim was on property owned by Stanford University. The victim, Leslie Marie Perlov, was last seen talking to a young man at the law library of the Palo Alto Municipal Court. The composite of the young man seen talking to Perlov at the law library closely resembles the composite of Bundy which appeared in Reader's Digest.

The second case is similar in M.O. in so far as the victim, Janet Ann Taylor, was discovered March 25, 1974 in a rural area not far from Palo Alto. The cause of death was also strangulation.

If possible, could you provide us with any information concerning Ted Bundy's whereabouts on or about February 13, 1973, and March 25, 1974.

We have enclosed a flyer and a photo copy of the composite from the Perlov case.

We appreciate your efforts to assist us on this matter. Please send your reply to Sgt. Ken Kahn, Santa Clara County Sheriff's Office, 180 West Hedding Street in San Jose, California 95110.

Dear Mr. Koppel:

I read in March 1981 Reader's Digest about the Ted Bundy murders.

When I saw the pictures of the victims I was shocked. They all looked remarkably similar to my old girlfriend, Patty Nichols of Webberville, MI. January 1974 was the first month after I graduated from college. I thought Patty and I had an understanding that she would come to me in Bloomington, IN as soon as I graduated from college.

I didn't murder those women or any other women. But I think Ted Bundy did it on the basis of hearing voices and seeing visions, and I think I am the source of those visions and voices.

If you don't believe my story, ask Webberville police to send you a picture of Patty Nichols as she appeared in 1969 when I knew her. She told me she was 19.

Sincerely yours,

Alan Russell Owens

Dear Detective Keppel,

I am a psychology major, writing my thesis on "Sociopath: Ted Bundy."

After reading an article in Reader's Digest, I wrote to Mr. Nathan M. Adams, Senior Editor. He suggested that I write to you for the information, as he did not have it.

I would like the birthdates of all victims (supposed or assumed), the birthdate of Ted Bundy, the birthdates of any victims who did not die. It appears Ted killed his alter-ego. Most of the victims were the same age and description.

If you cannot provide the information, would you please advise who could? I'm really trying for an "A" and need as much information as possible.

If you incur any expense, I would be most happy to reimburse you.

You cooperation and assistance is greatly appreciated.

Dear sir,

I have just finished reading the article in the March 1981 Readers Digest concerning you investigations of Theadore Robert Bundy.

I had a fourteen year old daughter leave Huntley Project Schools, Worden Montana, the morning of April 7, 1972. She was found dead near the town of Medara, North Dakota April 22 or 23, 1972. She had been left much the way your girls were found.

She had been superficialy stabbed, strangeled, and had been tied but there were no rope fibers present. She was nude with the clothes scattered near her. She had been wearing a small Indian made sterling silver and tourquoise cross that was never found. Her other jewelry was with her. We also recieved anonomous telephone calls.

Her name was Lora Jean Martin Dugan, born september 26, 1957. Her description is as follows; large brown eyes, shoulder length brown hair parted in the middle, five foot six or seven inches, one hundred and fifteen pounds. The autopsy was performed at Bismark, North Dakota.

There were other girls missing at this time from both Montana and North Dakota. I do not know if they were found. The similarities of your cases and my daughter's is striking. I would like to know if Mr. Bundy was the man so we could be able to lay this to rest.

The investigating officers were Mr. Leo Novacek, special agent, Robert V. Sickler, superintendent Bureau of Criminal Investigation P.O. Box 1054 Bismark, North Dakota 58501. Sgt. Dwight Makay and Detective Penrod- Yellowstone County Sheriffs Office, Billings, Montana.

I was never satisfied with the investigation that was done here. Although our Yellowstone County Sheriff Died Jult 1972. The people in North Dakota I never heard from afer identiying her.

I am sending copies of this letter to Salt Lake City, Aspen, Seattle and Orlando.

Sincerely,

Betty Jean Dugan

Dear Bob --

Thanks for taking time out to talk with us last week. Somehow, someway, we'll get this story nailed down yet.

In that regard, you'll find below a list of dates that might interest you. They are taken from Bundy's law school class notes. We still have the notes, so they can be double-checked. We worry that he got the day wrong once in a while, but their content should be matchable against his progessors' teaching outlines. At least we hope so. We do not have his course sked, nor do we know the times of the classes.

Which reminds us. Did you talk to the people in his car pool? Anything there? And one more point. Bundy's roomate at McMahon Hall was a guy named Larry, we think, who wound up teaching Chinese at Western in Bellingham. Did he offer anything?
